

I don't believe the National Association of Broadcasters should have power over what I CHOOSE to listen to. I spend hard earned money every month to listen and enjoy satellite radio. Perhaps the NAB should be more concerned with improving their offerings to us instead of using government intervention to force listeners over to their stations. Is this or is this not a country built on free enterprise? Should every new kid on the block have to put up with the corporation who feels threatened try to pass laws to protect their business? This whole thing is ridiculous.
